No trip to DC feels quite right without doing these three things: riding the metro and admiring Harry Weese's impressive stations; strolling the National Mall and admiring the Washington Monument; and going to Georgetown to admire Relish. Tucked away in Cady's Alley off of busy M street, this shop is unlike any other local shop you may find, in beauty or breadth of covetable designer wear. To me, it's as much a sight to see as any national monument. If those memorials mark victories of past history, think of Relish for fashion victories of the present and future.
